Garrett May Carry Protest To
Head of Italian
K. of C.

PLAYGROUNDS CASE

Places Ordered Closed Operated at Cost of $75,000
Per Year

By Guglielmo Emanuel
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

ROME, June 1.—Intervention by Ambassador John W. Garrett in the breach between the Italian Government and the Vatican was seen here today as a result of the closing of playgrounds operated in Rome by the American Knights of Columbus.

It was confidently expected that the American ambassador would carry the protest of Edward Hearn, a papal count and head of the order here, to Foreign Minister Dino Grandi.

The playgrounds for Italian children operated at a cost of $75,000 a year were ordered closed by Premier Mussolini's decree dissolving Catholic organizations throughout the country and closing their clubhouses.

Hearn announced that the playgrounds are operated for Italian children of all creeds and have no connection with the Church. The Italian Government, he said, had no right to close them.

Should the Government adhere to its announced intention of carrying out the Premier's order to its full extent, about 15,000 clubs of the Catholic action, comprising 500,000 members, would be closed by tonight.

Pope Pius XI. issued a summons to the Cardinals of the Holy College for a meeting at 10 a. m. today at which the situation will be thoroughly discussed and the formal attitude of the Catholic Church formulated.

Rebekah Assembly Meets In Harrisburg This Week

The 108th annual session of the Grand Lodge and the 42nd annual session of the Rebekah Assembly, Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Pennsylvania, are convening at Harrisburg this week.

Most of the representatives reached Harrisburg yesterday in time to attend a special church service in the Salem Reformed Church. The sermon was delivered by Rev. Charles F. Freeman, of Doylestown, grand chaplain of the order.

Today will be devoted to the registration of representatives and delegates, and receptions to the grand officers and visitors. Business sessions of both bodies will convene at 9 a. m. Tuesday and continue until Thursday. This session of the grand lodge is expected to be of unusual interest for the reason that the new Constitution and By-Laws presented at the session of 1929 will come up for consideration and adoption.

Upon completion of the business of the session the new officers, elected in March, will be installed into their several offices.

Hon. Webster Grim, of Doylestown, will be succeeded by Rev. Simon Siple of Allentown, as grand master.

The latest reports show the order to be in a flourishing condition. In Pennsylvania there are 170,000 members in the subordinate lodges and 50,000 in the Rebekah, or women's branch. The order in this State maintains four homes for orphans two homes for aged Odd Fellows and their wives, and two Rebekah homes for aged.

SAGE REPORT ON COAL INDUSTRY FINDS BOTH SIDES FAIL PUBLIC

NEW YORK, June 1.—(INS)—The Industrial Studies department of the Russell Sage Foundation, in a report made public today, declared that neither the economic problem of the coal industry as a whole nor the discussion within the United Mine Workers can be dealt with effectively until both miners and mine operators are so organized as to be able to function together in consideration of their joint interests.

The report adds that "so long as a large part of the coal industry in the United States remains disorganized in its human relations, there can be little co-operation in the elimination of waste and conservation of coal."

"Throughout the world the output of coal exceeds the demand; as a result, relations between nations and between employer and employee in this industry are strained often to the breaking point, with strikes frequently

Patrons Flee As Troopers Raid the Hillside Inn

MORRISVILLE, June 1.—Several guests leaped through open windows or ran out of rear doors late Saturday night when Morrisville State Police raided the Hillside Inn, situated between Langhorne and Trevoise. There were about thirty patrons in the place shortly before midnight when the officers entered the front door. Many of them remained seated at the tables but others, fearing arrest, hastily found exits.

John Kaniecki, 35 years old, proprietor of the place, was arrested on the charge of possession of liquor, police saying that they found beer and whiskey in the place. The defendant was committed to the Langhorne Jail and will be arraigned before Justice of the Peace Bilger at S. Langhorne today. One hundred empty half-pint bottles were found in the hotel.

The inn has been raided many times and Saturday night's raid was the second within a month. Authorities declare that Kaniecki served a sentence of six months on a liquor charge. None of the guests were molested by the police.

The raid was made by Corporal Deane and Troopers Farrell, Christ and Stewart.

$10,000 GOLD GIFT ELECTION IS SOUNDING THE LAST CALL

Tonight is Last Opportunity to Enter Subscriptions in Big Vote Count; Finish is Near in The Great Campaign

BALLOT BOX WILL BE SEALED AFTER 10 TONIGHT

The Last Call: Tonight at ten o'clock the last Big Vote Period in the Courier's Gold Gift Election comes to a fateful close, now or never. New subscriptions this period carry a bonus vote of 20,000 while in the final period no bonus votes are credited.

Up to ten o'clock tonight extensions on First and Second Period subscriptions will carry first and second period regular extension votes. However, extensions will not carry extra votes during the final period, during which time all subscriptions are cast in a sealed ballot box not to be opened until the judges of the Election have declared the campaign officially closed.

All subscriptions contained in the ballot box will be credited with votes according to the final period offer, the smallest of the entire election.

Last Big Vote Offer

Your ultimate success will depend on your reports tonight. A lead secured now while the bigger votes are in force, will be almost impossible to overcome during the final week. If however, you fail to take advantage of the present large vote offer, you will have to trust to your good fortune in the last week and take far less votes for your subscriptions.

These are the conditions which exist and if you have any desire to win—make every minute between now and ten o'clock tonight productive.

Mail Reports Count

The special attention of candidates, especially out of town candidates and those who are working out of town today, is again called to the arrangement that has been made which affords every worker the advantage of securing subscriptions right to the last minute of this "period" (10 o'clock tonight), no matter where they may reside. All subscriptions placed in any post office anywhere before 10 o'clock tonight will be counted in on the big vote schedule, even though they do not reach the Campaign Headquarters until later.

Takes Big Score to Win

This much is certain, whoever wins any one of these prizes will probably do so by a very narrow margin, the winning scores will doubtless be large. If the present leaders are figuring that their leads are ample, they are due for disappointment when the winners are announced. With such a field of energetic workers, it is certain that some of the contest is yet to come. The "Never Say Die" spirit was never more in evidence at any other time than it is right now.

Big Campaign Soon Closes

On Saturday night, June 6, the big list of prizes will be awarded to the best hustlers. The large cash awards will be distributed just as announced at the beginning of the campaign. There is just a little less than one week left—and tomorrow the lowest vote offer of the contest and the sealed ballot box go into effect.

The keenest and most vigorous kind of work is necessary from now on if you hope to be declared one of the big

FIFTEEN BRISTOL SEA SCOUTS ATTEND BALL

In Conjunction With Bridge of Honor at Lang-

AWARDS PRESENTED

The Sea Scouts of Bucks County held their spring ball and bridge of honor Friday evening, at the Bucks County Country Club, Langhorne. It was said that the Bucks County Country Club went "salty" for the entire evening for the atmosphere of the ball room was unmistakably sea-going. Ninety Sea Scouts, leaders, and their ladies made up the crew and to the tune of "Anchors Aweigh" the ball was off for the evening with the grand march.

In the center of the ball room there was a very clever arrangement of a ship with a mast and sail, running lights, railing, gangways, jack and ensign, steering wheel and other fundamental parts of a Sea Scout ship. On the deck of this ship the orchestra was located and the dancing was carried on around the ship. In one end of the hall a ship's bridge was constructed, very similar to a bridge seen at sea. On one end of the bridge was a searchlight, in the center a compass and binnacle stood and leading aft from the bridge was the gangway that all the fair ladies mounted in true sailor fashion, led and supported by the Sons of Neptune.

The evening's program was in three sections: First, a set of six dances; second, the bridge of honor and the presentation of awards merited and earned in Sea Scouting, refreshments; third, a concluding set of six dances. This ball the second of its kind to be held in the county was held under the auspices of the guest ship the S. S. S.

APPROVING FIRST LAW WAS WASHINGTON'S DUTY

Lays Down Form for Oath of Allegiance to Constitution

PROVISION IS GIVEN

Critical Americans who profess to be troubled by the multiplicity of our laws have consolation within easy reach. They have only to turn back, either in imagination or in real research, to the day when our nation had, not simply few laws, but no laws at all. The experience of turning back is guaranteed to furnish either a sigh of relief or a thrill of pleasure; for there was a day when the first Congress of the United States, at its first session, had to pass a first law, to be approved by the first President of the United States—George Washington.

A representative of the Division of Information and Publication of the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission has had the privilege and the thrill of reading the text of the first law ever passed under the Constitution of the United States, which Washington signed on June 1, 1789, as printed in a first volume of these laws that belonged to George Washington himself. And very fitting you will find this first of our national laws. It lays down the form and the method of administering the oath of allegiance to the Constitution of the United States, to be required of every officer of the Government, elected or appointed, high or low.

Incidentally, this first law ever passed by the United States Congress authorized and justified Calvin Coolidge in having himself sworn in as President by his father, a justice of the peace in a village in Vermont.

The thin little calf-bound volume of 185 pages containing these acts of the first Congress, and bearing the flowing signature of "G. Washington," in token of his ownership, is one of the rare possessions of the Library of Congress. It bears on its title page, "Acts Passed at a Congress of the United States of America, Begun and Held in the City of New York the Fourth Day of March in the year 1789 and of the Independence of the United States the Eleventh." It was published by the firm of Hodge, Allen and Campbell, of New York, 1789.

As a further incident of interest, this is probably the first observance of what is now fixed custom in dating Presidential proclamations and other state papers—that of adding to the calendar date, A. D., also the year since American Independence.

This volume of the first laws of the United States opens with the full text of the Constitution itself. Then follows the first law, under the caption of "Chapter I." The provision reads:

"An Act to regulate the Time and Manner of Administering certain Oaths.

"Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Oath or Affirma-

Arrested and Fined For Reckless Driving

Three Philadelphia men were given the privilege today of either paying fines or going to jail after they had been convicted of reckless driving on the Bristol Pike at Cornwells Heights.

The trio—Howard Mitchell, 2714 N. Howard street; Joseph Porter, 2316 Waterloo street; and William Munce, 2809 Swanson street, were convicted at a hearing before Justice of Peace James Laughlin in the Municipal Police Court here.

The three men driving in a roadster narrowly escaped crashing into the Cornwells Heights fire apparatus and then they are alleged to have used very offensive and abusive language.

The apparatus of Cornwells Heights Fire Co., No. 1, had just extinguished a blaze on a P. R. T. bus near the service station of Percy Underwood. The passengers were being transferred to another bus and the fire apparatus was backing out of a lane. The roadster with the three men in it came down the Pike at a reckless speed and despite the sounding of the apparatus siren failed to stop but continued on through the crowd.

Chief Joseph Dedrick and Assistant Chief A. Wilkinson both testified this morning against the men.

Mitchell was fined $28.50 and each of the other two $13.50. The men claimed they were out of work and hence they will have to go to the county jail.

The arrests were made by Constable Thomas Crawford.

Impressive Services Are Held Here Memorial Day

Ritualistic ceremonies were conducted by the three patriotic organizations participating in the Memorial Day parade, at the rear of the Bristol Cemetery chapel, on Saturday morning. The groups were: Robert W. Bracken Post, 382, American Legion; Colonel J. M. Gosline Camp, Sons of Veterans; and Joseph A. Schumacker Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The address given by Colonel George Ross, of Doylestown, was a most stirring one.

The services at the Methodist Graveyard, St. Mark's Churchyard and St. Mark's Cemetery were brief, being in charge of the Legion post.

Graves of the soldier dead were decorated with spring blossoms and flags, and many were at the several services.

The parade conducted through a number of principal streets of the borough was participated in by a large number, the groups taking part being: Bracken post and auxiliary; Gosline camp, Schumacher post, American Legion Cadet bugle corps, Bracken post bugle corps, Boy Scouts, etc.

HULMEVILLE, Pa., June 1.—Memorial Day services at Beechwood Cemetery, were of unusual interest this year, the program being preceded by a parade of fraternal and patriotic organizations, Boy Scouts and Cubs, Girl Scouts, school children of Hulmeville and South Langhorne and others. The Red Hill band furnished marching music as well as selections at the cemetery.

The program at Beechwood included: Brief service at a soldier's grave by the Jesse W. The Hulmeville boys and girls are scheduled to arrive in Harrisburg shortly before noon on June 5th and will spend their first afternoon visiting the capitol, state museum and the new capitol park development. ## LATEST NEWS

Mt. Holly, N. J., June 1.—An intensive man-hunt was in progress in the wooded sections surrounding here today, following an attack on Mrs. Lillie Malsbury, 56, of New Egypt, near here, early yesterday.

Mrs. Malsbury told police, after she was taken to a Trenton hospital in a critical condition, her attacker was Charles Falkner, 24, her foster son. She said Falkner grabbed her by the throat as she entered the kitchen of her home and struck her several times with a hatchet, then fled when her cries attracted the attention of her husband and farm laborers. Falkner eluded the farm hands and escaped into the thickly wooded section here. He was armed with a shotgun and revolver.

State Police were called into the chase and today it was expected bloodhounds, from the State Police Barracks at Wilburtha will be called into the hunt.

Mrs. Malsbury is said to be recovering. She sustained two severe scalp wounds. Her husband, David, told police he knew of no motive for the attack by the foster son.

TWO MEN INJURED, HORSE IS SHOT, AS ACCIDENTS' RESULTS

'Colonel' Asay Slightly Hurt;
Carriage is Completely
Demolished

DROVE WITHOUT LIGHT

Philadelphian Escapes Serious
Burns in South Langhorne Crash

The holiday week-end was marked by a minimum of accidents in this vicinity, officers being called out but few times to straighten out traffic tie-ups caused by crashes.

One man was hurt in an accident occurring last night at Edgely and his horse injured to such an extent it had to be killed; and a second individual was slightly burned as the result of an auto accident near South Langhorne, early yesterday.

Driving his horse down the wrong side of the highway at Edgely last night after 10 o'clock, with the carriage minus a light of any description, "Colonel" Asay, of Bristol Township, had a most narrow escape from serious injury, the horse was so severely hurt that it had to be shot, and the carriage was demolished when struck head on by an automobile.

"Colonel" Asay was treated at the Harriman Hospital for cuts and bruises, and then returned to his home; the horse was shot by Constable Thomas Crawford; and the fragments of the carriage which together with the driver and horse had been carried by the automobile for about 100 feet, were quickly removed from the highway. The automobile, operated by Frank Creytmiller, of Edgington, was also considerably damaged, but the driver was unhurt.

Creytmiller was enroute to New York when the accident occurred, and did not see the horse and carriage of Asay as it was driven toward him on the same side of the thoroughfare. The crash was heard by many in the vicinity, people hurrying from their homes to learn the cause of the impact.

The accident occurred in front of the Edgely Service Station. Two of the horse's legs were broken, and deep gashes were upon its body.

"Colonel" Asay, who is 85 years of age, miraculously escaped severe injuries and probable death. No bones were broken, and his minor injuries were quickly attended to at the hospital.

Frank Dolan, of 5894 Master street, Philadelphia, narrowly escaped serious burns early yesterday morning when his automobile collided with another machine on the Lincoln Highway near South Langhorne and then set fire to two gasoline pumps and an oil pump in front of a service station.

Dolan was driving toward Philadelphia about 4 a. m. when, police say, he sideswiped a machine operated by George Canfield, of 243 Brighton avenue, East Orange. Canfield's car, which contained the driver and three other men, was pushed into a ditch but the occupants escaped injury.

Dolan's car shot across the road and struck the pumps in front of the Blue Spruce Inn. Passing autoists extinguished the flames in a short time after a little damage had been done.

Canfield's car was badly damaged. The owner and his companions had little money with them so Patrolman Coughlin, of the Langhorne State Highway Patrol, took the autoists to the barracks and later secured a ride on a passing truck for them. Dolan told authorities that he lost control of his car.

VISITING PARENTS

RIGHT OF WAY

Throughout the world there are powers and forces in strife and currents and cross-currents that strike up conflicting eddies in the fundamental stream that drives us all along. Civilization, which is no more than the enlightened purpose of humanity, has this chief mission—to give right of way to the things that matter most.

If happiness and order are to increase, the barriers (thrown up out of waste and rubbish) must be broken down and the stream be cleared and hastened. Of life, energy and vigorous labor there may be enough in the world, but without good intention, a clear course and a right of way for best thoughts and good purposes, our human progress is slow, encumbered and disappointing.

Within every man is a small pattern of the swirling world he lives in. He also is confused with varied currents and disordered with varied stuff garnered out of his brief experience. His personal problem is the same; to determine what matters most and give it right of way over the lesser things that seek to seize and hold him.

This important thing may be the work that he has chosen, the ambition of his heart, the character he aims to build or the faith he loves. This thing is the main current of his life and determines his personality and power. In ordering his course, he must give it the right of way.

A RURAL INSTITUTION

One of the symbols of rural outdoor life which was long overlooked by the reformer is the galvanized iron mail box which stands on its split rail in front of every farm house. The type now in use is almost as old as rural free delivery.

These boxes are gregarious creatures at crossroads, loving their kind and dwelling together often in grotesque companionship. Some lean together as if forever whispering sweet secrets; others pull apart as if petulant after a quarrel. Occasionally the group assembles in more formal, orderly fashion and is given the dignity of an up-right anchorage in better keeping with the great postoffice department.

With half an imagination one may picture these rural mail boxes chatting with each other interminably like an endless session of a sewing circle. If they could talk, they would probably speak of the eccentricities of the men and women who posted them at the crossroads as sentries of civilization, of the weather and about the condition of the highways.

What happened to the proposal of a year or so ago to install at crossroads and rural centers cabinets of lock boxes similar to those in postoffices? It is to be imagined that the scheme provoked such a storm of protest among rural folk, with whom the traditional type of mail box is a cherished institution, that it had to be abandoned.

It still remains true that the way of the transgressor is hard.

Disillusioned and disgusted graduates of 1880 will be disposed to grant them their wish if the graduates of 1931 want to take over complete management of the world.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

ITEMS OF INTEREST AS CLIPPED FROM NEWSPAPER FILES

Fifty-three years ago, or September, 1878, the Bucks County Gazette published the following:

On Tuesday, September 3, 1878, the Young Democracy of Bristol gathered at No. 1 engine house and was called to order by Captain Charles Fenton, the president. After the preliminary business was transacted a communication from Symington Phillips was read. Mr. Phillips' communication commended the object of the Young Men's Democratic Association, but he stated: "I would most respectfully protest against a resolution on the minutes in which the words 'dishonest' and 'criminal' occur," and the writer hoped that these offending terms would be expunged.

The communication was placed on the minutes and a motion was made that the resolution adopted at the last meeting be amended so as to make it less harsh, but William S. Daniels and George E. Stout spoke in opposition to any change, as it would look, they declared, like backing down. They claimed the club meant just what the resolution said: they were tired of supporting tickets fixed up by Jackson Hibbs & Co., and the Republican leaders and thought it better to turn Jackson out of the party rather than have the whole Democratic party mislead into supporting Republicans under the guise of Democrats. A motion by Monroe Booz was finally adopted laying the question on the table until the next meeting. At the following meeting the members stood by their colors and refused to expunge.

the "corrupt and dishonest" section of the resolution they adopted.

In the issue of September 19, a column was devoted to baseball news. The Keystone, Bristol's champion team, was defeated at Langhorne by the score of 13 to 9, but the Langhorne club is accused of hiring three professionals from Philadelphia, the catcher, pitcher and third baseman, and the Gazette states further that "neither Lew Hall at centerfield nor Vandegrift at right have ever to our knowledge been known to claim Langhorne as their residence or that they were members of the club there." Evidently the importation of foreign players was not much in vogue those days.

The A. K. Joyce team defeated the Tully-Ho by the score of 48 to 12. Three men of the former team were credited with seven runs each, Githens, Groom and Muchnick, the latter being pitcher for the A. K. Joyce.

The Bristol team defeated the Eckford by the score of 10 to 8.

Helpful Advice to Girls

By NANCY LEE

DEAR NANCY LEE:

I am a freshman in high school and am very fond of a boy also going to school. At times he seems to care very much for me, but occasionally he acts cold. I have never done anything to cause his displeasure and do not understand his actions. He refuses to talk about it. When with me he professes to love me but around other girls he talks about me and says he will never go with me again. He often goes with girls who haven't the best reputation. Should I continue associating with him?

BLONDIE.

BLONDIE: If you want to be made a fool of, then by all means continue your association with the boy. But surely you are a girl of pride and common sense and so will realize that there is nothing to gain by such a friendship. The type of man who will discuss his friendship with a girl, as he has done, is the type of man to be avoided by any decent girl. Find other friends and interests.

DEAR NANCY LEE:

We are two girls just entering our twenties—a school teacher and a stenographer. We consider ourselves attractive, are well read and can converse intelligently. We are in love with our work but far from happy. We can not make ourselves popular with the boys no matter how we try. We long for companionship with young men of equal mentality, but they simply do not exist for us. Must we smoke, swear, drink and get to be popular?

TWO LONESOME WORKING GIRLS.

GIRLS: If the crowd with which you travel does things of which you disapprove, it should be up to you to change your circle of friends. Surely a school teacher should find it comparatively easy to find a circle of cultured, intelligent people who know how to live without overdoing things. In the meantime, just see what dancing and the ability to take a hand at bridge does for you. I guarantee that neither of these pastimes will do you any harm.

Copyright, 1930, by Faith Baldwin Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Mary Lou Thurston, a beautiful and vivacious girl of the "home" type, orphaned by the death of her parents, lives with her aunt and uncle, Clara and Howard Sanderson. Mary looks after Billy, their youngest, while they go to business. Larry Mitchell, energetic, young newspaper reporter, is Mary Lou's pal. Mary Lou is happy but restless and eager for adventure. Sanderson gets a wonderful chance to go to the Orient on an engineering project. Mary Lou urges the Sandersons to go although she will be stranded.

CHAPTER III.

"LOOK here, Mary Lou, marry me—I haven't much, but we can get along somehow," said Larry abruptly, and his own voice sounded strange to him. "I don't want you behind a counter or galivanting around by yourself. You—you are a dear little idiot and you'd get into all sorts of jams. You marry me, Mary Lou, and I'll take care of you!" he ended, sternly.

Mary Lou stared at him speechless. Then the bright tears welled to her eyes and fell . . . round droplets sliding down her flushing cheeks.

"Am I so—distasteful to you?" he asked, in dismay.

"No—no—you're the best friend I have on earth," choked Mary Lou, "and—and—oh, Larry, what a lamb you are! Asking me to marry you when—you're so ambitious, so anxious to get ahead . . . asking me to come and be a burden, a regular old millstone. You don't want me, really, Larry, you don't love me, dear."

"But . . ." began Larry, helplessly.

"No, you don't! Not . . . not the marrying way. And I don't love you—that way. Every other way, yes. But not . . . not that. Larry, you know I won't marry you—but—I do thank you for asking me," said Mary Lou with a quaint sort of ceremony.

A Way Out.

He took her cold little hands in his own and leaned close to the fragrant, rounded cheek, the crop of curling red-gold hair.

"I want to take care of you," he said stubbornly.

Chivalry isn't dead, after all. Mary Lou shook her head.

"I'll have to take care of myself," she cried out, "and it's high time I learned how. Get me a job, Larry, any kind of a job, and I'll be so grateful to you. And now, for mercy's sake, go home."

She turned a little and brushed a very small kiss across his lean, freckled cheek, and got to her feet.

"Golly," said Mary Lou, simply, "but you're a good friend."

The following day being Sunday, Mary Lou, Billy and the Sandersons journeyed out to Oakdale, Long Island, to see Grandmother Jennings and talk over their plans.

On the train, as Howard endeavored to restrain his small son from hanging out of the window while demanding to ride with the engineer—"Why can't I ride with the engineer, daddy?"—Clara and Mary Lou sat together and soberly discussed the details of closing up the little rented house, details which would fall to Mary Lou's lot to attend to, as Clara would have to keep on with her position and break in her successor until practically the last minute.

For it had finally been decided that the Sandersons would accept the offer, that Billy would go to his grandmother's and that Mary Lou would go with him, remaining until such time as she could make other arrangements.

Mary Lou, looking with blind blue eyes at the Autumnal landscape, was trying hard to be extremely practical and matter-of-fact. Now and then, in a small red notebook, with a pencil stub, she managed to make shaky, scrawly notes while she questioned Clara severely as to what would be stored, what must be sold and what would be packed.

The Sandersons' boat would sail the first week in November and there was a great deal to do.

"You must," said Mary Lou, wisely, "buy thin clothes. You can't trot off east of Suez with a fur coat and sports tweeds!"

Strong Ties.

Clara looked at her niece with sudden, hurting compunction.

"It's going to be pretty bad," she said, "leaving Billy. I—I sometimes wonder how I can do it. I get—panicky. But you? If only I knew you were to be with him permanently, settled—or with someone I knew and trusted. I feel dreadfully about it, Mary Lou, as if . . . as if I were failing you so."

Her clever, brown eyes were bright with unusual tears. Mary

Lou and Larry Mitchell had seemed to her in less overwrought times, and still seemed, deep in her heart, she could not help wondering for one wild moment if, after all, such a solution wouldn't be the best and safest thing for Mary Lou under the present topsy-turvy circumstances. She opened her firm, red mouth to say something and shut it again, irresolute. But Mary Lou, with the almost psychic sense she had at times, and a very disconcerting sense she often found it, forestalled her by reading her thoughts neatly and accurately.

"And I'm awfully fond of him," she told Clara quickly, "but, oh, I know what you're thinking. It wouldn't work. Larry doesn't love me, Clara, and I don't love him. Not in the way we should—to get married, I mean," she went on, flushing, confused, adorable in her confusion.

"I know," said Clara and sighed a little.

"But he'll look after me," Mary Lou assured her. "He's going to help me get a job."

Arriving at Oakdale they en-

"You marry me, Mary Lou, and I'll take care of you," said Larry.

Lou gave her arm a little pinch. "Don't be silly . . . I'll get along—grand!" said Mary Lou. "Something will turn up, see if it doesn't," she went on breathlessly.

"There's always an adventure just around the corner. Of course," she went on, more soberly, while writing in the red book, "remember to store Clara's Hudson seal." "Of course, it's a darned shame I haven't any marketable talent! Still, there's always a possibility of being a housekeeper to some delightful rich old gentleman who would die in a couple of years and leave me three millions and a house at Palm Beach," added Mary Lou, laughing, but with her inextinguishable sense that life was, after all, an exciting fairy story and herself in the very midst of it.

At that, fairy stories had a way of plunging their heroines into all sorts of unhappy situations and curious escapades, but there was always rescue just ahead, and even a Prince Charming. Not that she cared much about princes . . . except Larry, who was a very modern sort of prince.

Clara spoke of him now. "Larry Mitchell thinks we're brutes to go off and leave you!" she commented.

"Did he say so?" asked Mary Lou, bristling in instant defense of her relatives.

"Well, no, hardly that," conceded Clara, laughing, "but—I could tell. He's awfully fond of you."

She broke off abruptly. Unsuitable as a marriage between Mary

Lou and Larry Mitchell had seemed to her in less overwrought times, and still seemed, deep in her heart, she could not help wondering for one wild moment if, after all, such a solution wouldn't be the best and safest thing for Mary Lou under the present topsy-turvy circumstances.

Sage Report On Coal Industry Finds Both Sides Fail Public

principles to which all can agree. And agreement on guiding principles can be secured only if there be such relationship between groups as to make possible conference and negotiation in the day-to-day procedures of managing an industry."

The study was made for the Foundation by Louis Bloch now statistician for the Department of Industrial Studies of the State of California. Its object was a quantitative analysis of the administration of agreements between miners and operators during the last 30 years.

The report of this study is contained in a book of 400 pages entitled "Labor Agreements in Coal Mines," which analyses 10,000 disputes in the coal mines and the methods of settling them through joint conference and arbitration.

The investigation was confined to the Central Competitive Field which includes the coal mining regions of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Western Pennsylvania, where the Foundation said, the machinery for agreements between operators and miners had been most highly developed. Illinois was chosen for intensive study.

The survey included examination of documentary material, field investigations, interviews with miners and mine officials, and attendance at the adjudication of numerous disputes. Analysis of recorded disputes, however, provided the groundwork of the investigation.

This analysis makes clear, Bloch declares, that a code of agreed customs is in the making in the coal industry of Illinois and the rest of the Central Competitive Field.

Bloch's conclusion is that "giving coal miners a share in the management of coal mines, in regard to their working conditions, yields the direct benefit of a freer, more satisfied and therefore more efficient body of workers."

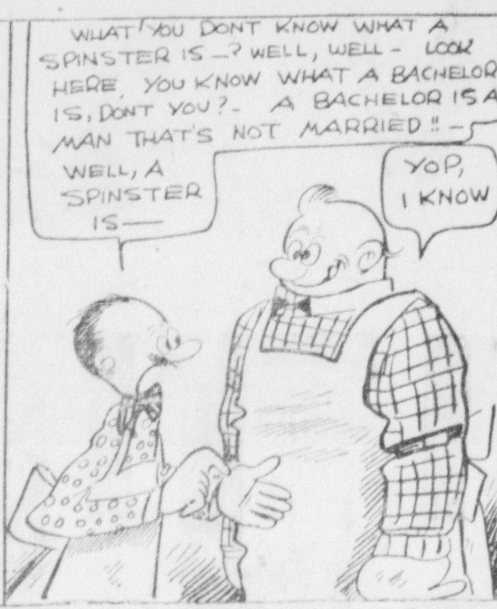

"Collective bargaining carried with it spiritual value of equal importance," Bloch declared. "The organized worker feels that he can deal on equal terms with his employer in matters pertaining to his employment. The dignity which attaches to this sense of equality is one of the spiritual values accruing to the workers under a system of collective bargaining. The knowledge that he has this protection against unjust discharge or indiscriminate assignment to a bad working place is as important to the miner as getting a higher rate of wages."

Which Boy Would You Choose For Your Son?

Winifred Black Finds Two Young Moderns, One Bored, the Other Viciously Interested in Life—And Asks You to Make Your Choice.

By WINIFRED BLACK

THE Young Fellow is having the time of his life. He's taking a trip across the continent, and everybody on the train envies him.

Everybody that has enough sense to envy anyone, I mean.

The Young Fellow hated to go to bed last night—he was afraid he'd miss something. He went and sat in the observation car and talked politics with a grumpy old gentleman, racing with rather a flashy young man, and pictures with a movie actor. Oh, he had a marvelous time!

Nobody was up in his car this morning until 9 o'clock—except the Young Fellow.

He was up at the first streak of dawn.

Out on the platform, getting what he called "a breath of fresh air."

The wind was blowing a gale—but he loved it.

The harder it blew the more he laughed. He buttoned his overcoat around him and stood on the observation platform, conquering the weather like a Viking sailing a ship into the ice-flow of an unknown sea.

What to have for breakfast—that was the question?

Ham and eggs, with the eggs turned over, and sort of brownish with the ham gravy, don't you know; or little pie sausages and hot cakes, or maybe scrambled eggs and bacon—very crisp and hot biscuits and marmalade.

He got an inside seat close to the window and before his coffee was down he'd seen something like a bear track in the snow, beyond the railroad tracks.

Rabbits—why the place must be full of them. He saw their footprints by the thousands. And a flock of wild geese—he heard them honking, and saw them flying northward, even above the roar of the train.

He saw every little shack along the track and once he caught sight of a hobo camp, in a little group of ragged willows, just trying to act as if they thought it might be Spring, some time.

They had their blankets hung on the willows to air and were sitting crouched on the frosty ground frying something over a camp fire—hm, . . . how good it smelled!

The Young Fellow almost ran back to the dining car and ordered another breakfast.

The Young Man in the lower berth was terribly bored.

He read part of the time, snoozed part of the time and smoked and yawned part of the time.

No, he'd never been over this road before, but all roads were alike. Awful bore, traveling.

Dull people on the train—nothing doing.

Great Salt Lake—well, what was that, but water and sand? You couldn't taste the salt by looking at it, could you?

Tracks in the snow—what did he care about them? They wouldn't let you shoot from the train, and besides, hunting was an awful bore, when you came right down to it.

Which of these young men would you choose for your Son—if you could do the choosing?

Cross your heart, and tell me truly?

PLEASE!

When you drive your private automobile through Mill Street, in Bristol, please give a thought to the convenience of the passengers in the trolley cars.

The trolleys must move upon rails.

They cannot dodge to one side and the other.

With automobiles parked along both sides of the roadway, sometimes in a double row, progress through Mill Street at times is difficult.

If motorists will bear in mind that they cannot run over or through a trolley car, and will restrain their impatience so that the trolley may pursue its lawful and necessary course through the street, there will be no confusion, no tie-up of traffic, no inconvenience to anybody.

The summer months, when there are many strangers in our midst, are almost here. If our friends who are familiar with the congestion in Mill Street will set an example of courtesy and consideration, everything will be all right.

Give the other fellow a chance!

Attempts to pass the car ahead, with a trolley trying to come toward you, merely will make for delay and embarrassment.

Better to take time and be safe!

IN THE REALM OF SPORTS -- BOTH LOCAL AND NATIONAL

SPINNERS OF SPORT STORIES, IF TRUE, HAVE CHANCE FOR FAME

By ARTHUR E. DONEGAN
International News Service Staff Correspondent
HARRISBURG, Pa., June 1.—Pennsylvania's State Game Commission is going into the "true" story field.
But it isn't looking for tales of the little girl in the big city, nor the one of the "big shot" gangster who tells all on the underworld.
Yarns of wild life which have brightened campfires since the first days of the commonwealth are sought by the commission from sportsmen of the state.
As a means of interesting sportsmen, hunters and fishermen in the work of the commission, officials have broadcast an appeal for authentic stories dealing with animals, game and predatory, which will be published by the commission.
And hunters who polish up the annual story of the "big one" they "almost got" last year—to the desperation of companions—will have a chance to break into print with the prize yarn.
Stories spun by the old-timers and guides of wood and mountain; of hand-to-hand battles with wounded bear and deer, are the sort the commission is looking for.
Or the ones dealing with the "magic white deer" which, in every locality has been the objective of hundreds of hunters until some prize marksman laid it low.
The dozen squirrels who lived in one tree and fell victim to the unerring hunter armed only with a .22-calibre rifle tale will even be considered by the commission. But spinners of it are warned it may be dangerous if it happened since the commission set a limit on the number of squirrels which may be bagged per day.
Any true story, concerned with unusual actions of any wild native animal will be considered for publication, the commission members announced.
But NOT the one about the huckleberry picker who escaped the ferocious old she-bear when the latter fell through the ice. They all know that one.

EMILIE Y. M. A. GOES DOWN FOR THIRD TIME

By T. M. JUNO
EMILIE, June 1.—The Emilie Y. M. A. ball team suffered its third straight defeat of the Bristol Twilight League here Friday night when they were downed by the Hibernians by the score of 6-3.
By virtue of their victory and the defeat handed to St. Ann's, the A. O. H. nine moved into third place.
Sullivan was on the mound for the Irish team and pitched excellent ball. He allowed but five hits and three of these came in the first frame, when the Emilieites scored all their runs. Sullivan also helped on the offense with two doubles.
"Gene" Dugan and "Nev" McGinley batted 1.000 in the game. Dugan had three out of three and McGinley two out of two.
Bruce, with two hits in three tries, led the losers with the stick.

The Federals won their first game of the Bristol Twilight League on St. Ann's field Friday night when they buried the St. Ann's team under the score of 12-5.

Baseball's "Brooks"

By HARDIN BURNLEY

LIKE the brook of Tennyson's fancy, Burleigh Grimes and Clarence Mitchell seem to be going on forever. These pitching Nestors (Grimes is 38 and Mitchell 42) have started the season in splendid form. Husky "Berly" is again the St. Louis Cardinals' big gun; while "Mitch" is a steady mound ace with the New York Giants. Both are so old in big league service that the spitball ban does not apply to them. They are the last of the saliva slant masters and both still employ it with dazzling effect.
Southpaw Mitchell broke into the majors with Cincinnati in 1916 after six years of minor league experience which started at Red Cloud in his native Nebraska back in 1909. He joined the Detroit Tigers the following season but was promptly farmed out to Saginaw. From Michigan he moved to Providence, R. I., in 1913; thence to Denver in 1915. Then the Reds took him but he spent most of 1916 in the bull pen or on the bench. That fall, Mitchell was transferred to Brooklyn, where he starred for several seasons until traded to the Phillies for George Smith in 1923. It was mistakenly believed then that he was slipping but "Mitch" did well with the Phils until 1927. That year, his bosses decided he was about through, so he was released the following Spring and picked up by the St. Louis Cardinals. With them, Clarence became brilliant for three seasons. He was traded to the Giants last year and has been an ace ever since.
The odyssey of Grimes (his ups and downs with Brooklyn, Pittsburgh, New York and St. Louis) is familiar to most fans. Like Mitchell, Burleigh's fade-out has been predicted often. But he, too, seems to improve with age. Right now both are among the most effective pitchers and neither shows the faintest sign of cracking. Smart heads and well preserved arms account for their big league longevity. May they keep on going great guns!

MONTAUK POWER BOAT CLASSIC EXPECTED TO DRAW RECORD FIELD

NEW YORK, June 1.—(INS)—The largest starting field since 1927 will compete for America's classic Gold Cup at Montauk, Long Island, next August, according to Charles F. Chapman, secretary of the racing commission of the American Power Boat Association.
Eight boats definitely have been entered, a new "mystery boat" is under construction, and additional entries have been promised, Mr. Chapman says, which may bring the field up comfortably close to the record number of 15 starters in 1926. There were seven starters last year.
George Reis, of Lake George and Pasadena, heads the list of Gold Cup challengers with two boats, the El Lagartito, which he raced last year, and a new craft, the Lizard.
The Montauk Yacht Club will stake its defense of the trophy on Hotsy-Totsy, Victor Kliersrath's winner of 1930, and Richard F. Hoyt's Imp, which won the honors in 1929.
Other veteran cup boats which will compete in this year's classic will be Scotty Toe, owned by Sam Dunsford, of Concord, N. H.; Gerald C. Holbrook's Red Banker and Richard Loynes' Californian, reputed to be the fastest Gold Cup boat afloat. Loynes also has promised a second entry from the Pacific Coast.
Besides the Lizard, at least two additional new boats are being built for the event, one of them a Miss Philadelphia for John Shibe, owner of the Philadelphia Americans. The other is being constructed by New Purdy for an unnamed owner who is said to be a newcomer in Gold Cup racing circles.
A challenge also has been received from Aaron De Roy, of Detroit, who is building a new 5½ liter boat for international competition in England in July, and Gar Wood has promised to enter a contender.
Commodore Caleb S. Bragg, of the Montauk Yacht Club, whose Baby Bootlegger won the Gold Cup both in 1924 and 1925, will be in charge of the arrangements for this year's event on August 15. In addition to the three 30-mile Gold Cup heats, it is planned to hold two heats of 151 cubic inch racing.
As an added attraction to the Gold Cup program, it was announced that the North Atlantic Fleet would be anchored off Montauk the day of the races.

Bristol People Asked To Contribute Cut Flowers

All citizens of Bristol and vicinity are urged to contribute cut flowers to the most worthy "Flowers for the Flowerless" movement.

Those wishing to share flowers with these unfortunate people are asked to leave same at the home of the workers on Wednesday evening or before 8 o'clock Thursday morning, or telephone one of the workers and some one will call for the flowers.
The following will have charge of the work during this month: June 4,

Mrs. Byron Johnson and Mrs. Earl Tomb; June 11, Mrs. Griffith Williams and Mrs. D. O. Taylor; June 18, Mrs. Franklin Wills and Mrs. Henry Rue; June 25, Mrs. Frank Lehman and Mrs. Theodore Megargree. Mrs. Earl Tomb is chairman of the committee.
